— Part B: Publishing Restrictions for ProQuest & Gumberg Library Digital Repository —

The graduate may choose to release the thesis or dissertation for immediate worldwide access, or to place the full-text under embargo for one year. An embargo is defined as a delay in the release of the full-text of a thesis or dissertation for a specified time period. The graduate will be notified when the embargo is set to expire. Instructions will be provided for requesting an embargo extension for a work in the final stages of preparation for publication. Regardless of the embargo period selected for ProQuest, the full-text of all ETDs will be available in the library repository after one year, unless an exception is granted. Under no circumstances may publication be indefinitely or permanently delayed.

Choose one:

_____ 1. Release the entire work immediately for access worldwide in both the Library and ProQuest.

_____ 2. Release the citation and abstract immediately for access worldwide. Delay release of the full-text of the dissertation or thesis for one year in both the Library and ProQuest.

After graduation, it is the responsibility of the graduate to contact ProQuest directly if they wish to extend the length of their embargo with ProQuest.
